

Alessandro Lugari

Short Bio

Alessandro Lugari received a degree in Technologies for conservation of cultural heritage at University of Tuscia in Viterbo, a degree in Conservation of mosaics at 'School of conservation of Mosaics' in Ravenna (Central institute of conservation) and a degree in Archeology at university of Molise. He has more than 35 years of experience on the conservation of mosaics and sectilia. In 2001 he begun to work as a conservator at the Opificio delle Pitre Dure di Firenze. After that he started to work at the Soprintendenza Archeologica di Roma, and in the last five years, at the Archeological Park of Colosseum, where he directs several conservation projects on mosaics, stones and sectilia. He is a founding partner of AISCOM (Italian association of study and conservation of ancient mosaics) in which is a member of the board. Over the last twelve years he organizes an international prize of contemporary mosaic, in Nazzano, a little village at north of Rome. He has been studying the construction methodology of ancient mosaics and has published several papers on ancient mosaic technology. He taught conservation of stone and mosaics at the Central Restoration Institute in Rome. Nowadays is a professor at University of Rome 'La Sapienza' where he teaches 'organization of the working site for conservation'.